Wheels in the Glasmann Head Coal Chute at Ogden Largest Going 'Round With Great Velocity These Days.

"If congress will confirm my appoint-ment I can be elected mayor, and then all h- can't keep me out of congress." This is the statement that is attributed to Ogden's acting postmaster in soliciting support for his confirmation for the posisupport for his confirmation for the posi-tion he now holds, at the early part of the next session of congress. It must not be understood that it is the intention that he should hold the postmastership for the term. Instead, he would almost immedi-ately resign from that position. In the meantime he would have received the nomination for the mayoralty on the Republican ticket and, so he himself modestly puts it, will have been elected to that position. It can be readily seen what a spleridid opportunity this would give him to come out with a statement that he would resign from the postmastership to accept the mayoralty, because he be-lieved he could better serve the people of Ogden in that position.

That Glasmann himself believes there will be some difficulty in getting his con-firmation through congress is evidenced by the fart that he is laboring with persons of influence to overcome any opposition that Utah's representatives in that body might have to the scheme. After all, Glasmann's main object is to land in congress. It is with this object in view that he is and has been working the political game so hard in this locality. Even those who profess to be friends of the erstwhile postmaster say that he can never secure that coveted place, for many reasons.

Rumor has it that Glasmann will step out of the local postoffice on Oct. 1 and then go in for the mayoralty nomination and election. Taking into consideration the statement quoted at the beginning of this story, it would appear that he intends to try out the other plan first.

More Than Doubtful.

Under conditions such as exist in the po-Under conditions such as exist in the political field of the city at the present time, it is not unlikely that Glasmann could secure the nomination for mayor and even the election, from the Repubsailing. However, all will not be clear sailing. There is a strong movement on foot to establish an independent party. At this time those who favor this movement talk of pleasing Locard's Beauty. At this time those who favor this move-ment talk of placing Joseph S. Peery at the head of the ticket this fall. It is claimed that Mr. Peery has virtually con-sented to the proposition and if the thing is carried through it is bound to be a prominent factor in the fall elections. It is claimed that a ticket of this kind would control the Democratic vote, as well as a large wing of the Republicans who are not in favor of another Glas-mann administration.

It is not believed that Mayor Conroy

It is not believed that Mayor Conroy will again accept the nomination at the head of the Democratic ticket, and it is difficult to determine who among the prominent men of that party will consent to make the fight. Aside from the mention of Glasmann's name the only other persons mentioned for the read of the Republican ticket are H. P. Randall, formerly a member of the city council and ture will be entirely removed to make way for additional trackage, and coal shovel-William Craig, the present president of that body. Both are from the Third ward and are able men. It is the bellef, however, that neither of these could raily enough strength to carry the convention against Glasmann and his corps of "the faithful." ers will have become a thing of the past in Ogden.

As to aspirants for the other city offices, there will be plenty of candidates. Many of the members of Glasmann's former council will try for the nomination again and should the acting postmaster win the mayorlty election he would prob-ably pull them through with him and ably pull them through with him and thus place in power the same regime that held sway prior to the election of two

Along with the many other railroad im-provements being made in the local yards, the largest coal chute on the Harriman system is rapidly being completed and will

the work for which more than a score of men are employed at the present time.
While the matter of reducing operating expenses is always considered by those who plan improvements for a railroad cor-poration, in the present instance time was also taken into consideration. When the new coal chute is in use it will be, in-deed, difficult to estimate the saving to other end of one of the numerous divi-sions running out of this city.

The work of unloading the cars is simplified. The drop bottoms are released, allowing the coal to drop into the pockets, making the shoveling of the coal unnecessary. Before the coal reaches the pockets from the cars, however, it passes man his fuel broken up into the proper size and ready for the fire-box.

On each side of the chute are six aprons. Through these the coal passes from the chute to the tender of the engine. They are of the latest improved pattern, and when in operation the quantity of coal that a tender will hold can be cut off to the exact pound, thereby allowing no waste whatever. Four locomotives can be coaled at the same time if necessary. The capacity of the chute can be stretched so as to hold 800 tons of coal. The structure is so built that additional pockets and aprons can be added at any time the business of the system demands it. It is built upon concrete foundations and is just twice the size of the one in opera-tion in the Harriman yards in Salt Lake.

Mrs. Bush was about 65 years of age and was a native of Holland, and for fifteen years lived in this city. She was committed from Ogden to the state mental hospital, where she died more than two weeks age. Acting wider the law duty to serve a contract of this association in 1905, appointed the initial committee on this subject. Bishop John Watson of the Fifth ward of Ogden recently learned of the case. Bishop John Watson of the Fifth ward of Couments set forth in the appendix to and as Mrs. Bush was formerly a resident of his ward he interested himself and communicated with the hospital authorities, and President Kingsbury of the university, with the result that the body will be shipped to Ogden today.

Convenient to the large roundhouse in the Harriman yards, the big coal chute rises fifty feet above the ground. There is a sharp incline running from the tracks below up to a height of thirty-five feet, to the point where the cars of coal must be placed for unloading into the huge pockets, of which there are six, each holding 100 tons. Ordinarily engines are used for placing the cars in position as required at the chute, but at this one a sixty-horsepower electric motor will pull the loaded cars up the incline and lower the empty cars. At the base of the incline there are two tracks, one to receive the empties and the other to store the loaded cars.
